This circular hike combines scenic high-altitude trails with traces of mining history on the Bartholomäberg. Already at Rellseck, the view opens up over Bludenz and the Walgau, before the trail leads you onward toward Itonskopf.

At the summit, a 360-degree panorama of the surrounding mountains awaits you. On the way back, two other notable landmarks along the route are the Fritzensee and the historic mine.

From the Baroque church in Bartholomäberg, the trail first takes you toward Rellseck. You can cover this section either on foot or by taking the hiking bus.

From Rellseck, continue along the geological nature trail to the Monteneu rest area and up to the Wannaköpfle. Following a scenic high-altitude trail, you'll eventually reach the base of the Itonskopf. The final section to the summit is rocky and partially secured with a steel cable. Sure-footedness is required here.

The return route takes you down a moderately steep slope to the Obere Wiese and then back to Bartholomäberg via farm roads, meadows, and forest trails.

Important Information

We recommend wearing weather-appropriate clothing, ankle-high hiking boots with good traction, hiking poles, and bringing plenty of water.

Tips

The historic mine at Bartholomäberg is worth a visit. The St. Anna tunnel in the tourist mine is more than 1,000 years old and open to visitors for about 115 meters.

The Rellseck Alpine Inn is also a great place to stop for a break. Other interesting destinations along or near the trail include the Baroque church in Bartholomäberg, as well as activities centered around traditional crafts and the mountain breakfast at Rellseck.
